I thought by the charge it included everything on the table !"

MASSES OF COLOUR. One of our greatest art critics is foud of telling us that there is no such thing as a vulgar colour, though there are many vulgar ways of arranging colours. Nobody ever objected to the most brilliant crimson, purple, or orange in a gladiolus, a-tulip, or a calceolaria. Nobody ever found the hues of sunset gaudy, or thought the rainbow overdone. The iridescence that plays upon the should be exposed to ghostly tricks—as was facets of an opal, the inner-surface of a pearly nautilus, or the dewy, petal of a rose, never struck the most fastidious eye as glaring, in spite of all its changeful wealth of pink and green and violet. Even among buman products we have each of us seen some specimens of Indian or Moorish workmanship, on which the brightest pigments known to man were lavished with an unsparing hand, and yet the total effect was not one of vulgarity, but raready prominently appeared in the records there of richness and splendour. Like the to its furthest admissible extreme, without ever overstepping the limits of perfect good taste.
